

Ellis Clyde to Be Brand Inspector for Wasatch

13 Aug 1970

The legal movement of cattle in Wasatch County is important. The district line has been changed, so many people are confused.

To the east of the district is the Wasatch-Duchesne county line, to the west is the Tooele line, to the south is Highway 6 and 50, or approximately the Spanish Fork line. To the north is the Weber-Morgan line.

Due to some changes in the program the Horners Brothers are no longer brand inspectors. They have served well for 12 years.

Ellis Clyde is now the brand inspector for Wasatch County. He will be more free to go to the country on inspections and the Department feels he can give better service.

The cattle under this program can go to the Spanish Fork, Ogden, and Salt Lake markets without an inspection as they will be inspected at destination, but all cattle sold here, that are shipped direct, will need a brand inspection when loaded.

The reason these cattle can go to these markets is the district line used to be Wasatch County. By putting Wasatch County from district 4 to district 2, makes the difference. The State Department inspects and maintains a good slaughter house in Kamas. You should get a brand inspection from Mr. Clyde before you take them over there for slaughter. The Department feels that the people in this area are very fortunate in having such a good clean slaughter house available for their use.

Horses, unless sold to go directly out of Utah, are charged $1.00 per head and this is good for a season pass or the entire calendar year.
